3. The Issuer may not issue securities in response to an application made by means of an electronic application form, unless the Issuer has reasonable grounds to believe that condition 2 has been complied with in relation to the applicant.
4. A person who gives another person access to the prospectus by electronic means must display a statement which the other person will see no later than the application form to the effect that securities to which the prospectus relates will only be issued or transferred on receipt of an application form issued together with the prospectus. Where relevant, the statement must add that the form may be generated by software accessible by the same means as the prospectus.
5. An electronic copy of a document must be a substantially faithful copy of the relevant paper original, but may differ from the original:
 - (a) in content, if the differences are trivial (for instance, typographical and spelling mistakes, and corrections of those mistakes, if they do not affect the sense); or
 - (b) in presentation (for instance, its general layout and formatting), if the differences do not result in a person breaching section 728, and in each case if those differences are not likely to:
 - (c) cause a reasonable person to confuse part or all of another document with the electronic copy; or
 - (d) reduce the likelihood of a reasonable person reading any part of the electronic copy.
 Subject to paragraphs 5(c) and (d), further examples of permissible differences in presentation under paragraph 5(b) include any or all of the following:
 - (e) immaterial differences in the arrangement of material;
 - (f) prompts to assist a person to read the electronic copy;
 - (g) hypertext links:
 - (i) within the electronic copy;
 - (ii) from the electronic copy to another document under Part 6D.2 (for instance, an electronic supplementary document or a document incorporated by reference under section 712);
 - (iii) to assist a person to apply for, or pay for, securities;
 - (h) the absence from (or simplification in) the electronic copy of graphics of a promotional or decorative nature (as opposed to those presenting substantive information, including headings, graphs and tables); and
 - (i) the use in the electronic copy of codes to control the display of the document, which are not themselves intended to be displayed.
6. An electronic prospectus:
 - (a) must contain a prominent statement to the effect that the offer or invitation to which it relates is available to persons receiving the electronic prospectus in this jurisdiction (whether or not it also indicates that it is available to persons in other places); and
 - (b) may contain any information which was set out in the relevant issuer original form.
7. Before issuing an electronic prospectus or electronic application form, the Issuer or the person who proposes to issue the electronic application must provide to the Commission:
 - (a) a complete and unaltered print out of the prospectus or form;
 - (b) if the prospectus or form will be issued on any disk, tape, CD-ROM or other article, a copy of that article; and
 - (c) if the prospectus or form will be made available on an internet site:
 - (i) the address of the site; and
 - (ii) an electronic copy of the prospectus or form.
8. Where one person by electronic means gives another person a notice or document to which this exemption applies, the person sends the notice or document to an electronic address currently nominated by the other person for the purpose.
If Part 6D.2 requires any other document to be sent with the document or notice, the person complies with the requirement by sending with the notice or document one or more of the following:
 - (a) an electronic copy of the other document;
 - (b) advice that an electronic copy of the other document is available at a specified electronic address;
 - (c) advice that a paper copy of the other document is available, by making a request to a specified telephone number or electronic address.
9. A person who sends or provides by electronic means a document to which this exemption applies must take all reasonable measures to ensure that it is received complete and unaltered.
10. A person who, in compliance with a condition of this exemption, states that a paper document will be provided on request, provides the copy, without charge and within a reasonable time after a request is received.
11. Where these conditions require one person ("A") to have reasonable grounds for a belief that a fact exists, or to take reasonable measures to ensure that a fact exists at a particular time, A may rely on a representation or agreement by another person ("B") that the fact exists or will exist at the proper time, if:
 - (a) B is more directly responsible than A for ensuring that the fact exists at the proper time; and

05/0394

(b) A has no reason to doubt that the fact exists or will exist at the proper time.

This includes reliance by a financial services licensee, publisher or other person concerned in the distribution of an electronic prospectus on information provided by the Issuer as to what, if any, supplementary or replacement documents have been lodged, or that an electronic prospectus complies with the requirements of this exemption.

12. A person who distributes electronic prospectuses (as an issuer of securities, a financial services licensee or as a publisher) and to whom this exemption applies keeps for seven years:
- (a) records adequate to demonstrate that it has complied with these conditions.
 - (b) if the Issuer or financial services licensee enables a person to apply for securities by using software — a copy of each screen which would be displayed to a person using the software to apply for securities, in any durable and legible medium.
