Part 1: Using this guideline

This guideline has been produced by the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) and the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC). The ACCC and ASIC enforce the Commonwealth consumer protection laws. For more information about the responsibilities of each agency, see appendix A.

In this guideline the terms ‘debt’ and ‘debtor’ are used to include alleged debts and alleged debtors respectively (see the glossary in appendix D for more on terms and phrases).

Who is this guideline for?

This guideline will help:

- collectors (including collection agencies, debt buy-out services, in-house collections departments of businesses and government bodies, solicitors and others)
- creditors who use external collection agencies to collect debts or sell or assign debts to third parties to understand how the Commonwealth consumer protection laws apply to them.

The guideline will also serve as a point of reference for financial counsellors and debtors’ advisers when negotiating with collectors about their practices. The ACCC and ASIC have developed a joint publication specifically for consumers called Debt Collection: Your Rights and Responsibilities.¹

What this guideline covers

This guideline explains how Commonwealth consumer protection laws relevant to collection apply. These laws include:

- Parts IVA and V of the Trade Practices Act 1974
- Part 2, Division 2 of the Australian Securities and Investments Commission Act 2001 (ASIC Act).

Part 2 of the guideline provides practical guidance on what collectors and creditors should and should not do to minimise the risk of breaching the laws administered by ASIC and the ACCC.

Part 3 of the guideline looks at the prohibitions and remedies against debt collectors who engage in:

¹ <<This publication is currently being developed. Details of how to obtain this publication TO BE INSERTED>>

Part 1: Using this guideline

- the use of physical force, undue harassment or coercion
- misleading or deceptive conduct
- unconscionable conduct.

Penalties

Part 3 also contains information on penalties for breach of the Commonwealth consumer protection laws.

Other laws

This guideline also refers to other laws and regulations not administered by the ACCC and ASIC, but which are relevant to debt collection. These include:

- Commonwealth privacy laws—administered by the Office of the Privacy Commissioner
- state and territory fair trading laws—which include conduct prohibitions mirroring those of the Commonwealth consumer protection laws
- the Uniform Consumer Credit Code—uniform state and territory legislation administered by the state and territory fair trading and consumer affairs agencies
- the Bankruptcy Act 1966—administered by the Insolvency Trustee Service Australia.

Various other laws, regulations and industry codes are also referred to in passing throughout the guideline. For a non-exhaustive list of other applicable laws, see appendix B. Also see the comments under the heading, ‘Relationship with court debt recovery processes’ later in Part 1.

Note: this guideline does not seek to deal with law on mortgages and other securities or guarantees.

Why has this guideline been developed?

This guideline replaces the ACCC’s Debt collection and the Trade Practices Act published in June 1999. Since then, ASIC has become responsible for consumer protection in financial services.² ASIC and the ACCC now share responsibility at the Commonwealth level for protecting people who are debtors or alleged debtors from unacceptable collection conduct.

This guideline reflects the joint responsibilities of the ACCC and ASIC for collection activity. It also takes account of:

² ASIC's role is set out in the Australian Securities and Investments Commission Act 2001, the Corporations Act 2001, and other legislation. See also appendix A of this guideline.

Part 1: Using this guideline

- recent cases that interpret the law governing debt collection³
- changes to the structure and practices of the collection industry in recent years
- stakeholder feedback after consultation about the guideline.

This guideline is not law

This guideline does not have legal force. ASIC and the ACCC cannot:

- make law—this is the role of parliament and the common law
- provide a definitive interpretation of the law—this is the role of the courts.⁴

Rather, this guideline:

- explains ASIC and the ACCC's view of the laws that we administer
- provides examples on how the law has been applied in particular cases
- gives guidance on what creditors and collectors should and should not do if they wish to minimise the risk of breaching the laws we administer.

Note:

- ASIC and the ACCC must approach each potential enforcement matter on a case-by-case basis, taking account of all relevant circumstances. Compliance with this guideline cannot provide a guarantee against enforcement action by ASIC or the ACCC.
- Businesses may also be subject to action by private parties.

The ACCC and ASIC encourage businesses engaging in collection activity to follow this guideline and incorporate it into their staff training, both in terms of the text and the spirit of the document.

³ See references in part 3 of this guideline.

⁴ Although this guideline does not have legal force, it should be noted that:

- A creditor or collector may agree contractually to adhere to this guideline. This will be the case, for instance, if the terms and conditions for a particular product or service stipulate that the provider of the service will abide by the guideline itself, or by an industry code of conduct requiring compliance with the guideline. In these circumstances, provisions of the guideline may be legally enforceable by the debtor on the basis of the creditor's contractual undertaking.
- Industry complaints handling schemes may consider this guideline when making binding determinations on scheme members. See further under part 2, section 23, The role of external dispute resolution schemes.

This guideline focuses on individual debtors

The guideline has been developed with particular reference to collecting debts from individual debtors. However, many of the laws and principles discussed will also be relevant to the collection of corporate or business debts.

This guideline applies to creditors as well as collectors

This guideline applies to creditors directly involved in debt collection as much as to specialist external agencies. In addition, when a creditor uses an agent for collection, the creditor (as principal) will generally be liable for their agent's conduct, including conduct breaching the Trade Practices Act or the ASIC Act.

Generally, a creditor will be responsible for their agent's collection activities even if the agent acts in a way that is contrary to an agreement or understanding between the creditor and agent about how the collection is to be undertaken.

A creditor may also remain liable for conduct in relation to a debt despite having sold or assigned the debt. Liability will remain, in particular, when misconduct occurred before the sale or assignment of the debt.

As well as using this guideline to ensure their in-house collection activities are compliant with the laws we administer, the ACCC and ASIC encourage creditors to incorporate this guideline into their contractual and compliance auditing arrangements with their agents and assignees.

Debtors' responsibilities

While this guideline focuses on the responsibilities of collectors, the ACCC and ASIC recognise that debtors have responsibilities too. Debtors are legally responsible for paying the debts they legitimately owe, and they should not deliberately try to avoid their obligations.

Whenever possible, debtors should take action before they get into difficulties. Debtors experiencing financial hardship should promptly contact their creditor, or the collector if the debt has already passed to a collection business, to negotiate a variation in payments or other arrangement. We also recommend that debtors in difficulties consider seeking the assistance of a community-based financial counsellor or other qualified professional who may be able to help them with a debt negotiation.⁵

The ACCC and ASIC's Debt Collection: Your Rights and Responsibilities gives consumers detailed advice on dealing with debt matters. We encourage creditors and collectors to refer debtors to this publication, and to the services referred to in the paragraph above, when appropriate.

⁵ See Appendix C for some contact details.

Relationship with court debt recovery processes

Broadly, debts may be recovered either through the courts, or by using creditor or collection agency personnel to negotiate repayments. Debt recovery through the courts is largely regulated by state and territory law and the procedural rules of the courts. The recovery process may also include the repossession of securities or other legal enforcement of security interests.

This guideline is mainly concerned with non-court debt recovery processes and informal collection activities after a judgment. It does not purport to limit a creditor's right to:

- conduct legal repossession activities and other legal enforcement of legitimate security interests
- seek and obtain pre-judgment remedies, for example, orders to prevent the removal or transfer of property from the jurisdiction
- seek and obtain judgment for a debt
- enforce judgment through a court process—including examination hearings, instalment orders, orders for the seizure and sale of property, garnishment or attachment orders, and/or
- undertake all necessary procedures (for example, for serving documents) associated with these actions.

However, a collector must not threaten action (legal or otherwise) that they are not legally permitted to take, or do not have instructions or authority to take. How legal action is threatened or employed can, in certain circumstances, amount to unconscionable conduct or harassment. A collector also must not represent an entitlement to seize goods beyond that granted by law. See part 2, sections 19–21 of this guideline for more information.

Read this guideline keeping in mind the rights given, and obligations imposed by the courts under debt recovery and other laws.

A flexible, fair and realistic approach to collection

We encourage creditors and collectors to work with debtors and to adopt an approach to repayment arrangements that is flexible, fair and realistic.

People often default on their debts as a result of circumstances that are beyond their control—such as unemployment, illness and family breakdown. While there are cases of fraud and deliberate evasion, most people are honest and want to meet their commitments if given a reasonable opportunity to do so.

We encourage creditors and collectors to be flexible. This includes making reasonable allowance for a debtor's ongoing living expenses, and recognising that debtors experiencing financial hardship will often have a number of debts owing to different creditors.⁶

Part 1: Using this guideline

When debtors act promptly and responsibly, and collectors are flexible, fair and realistic, the need for collection activity will be greatly reduced.

Roles of ASIC and the ACCC

For more information on the respective roles of ASIC and the ACCC for debt collection see appendix A of this guideline.

⁶ Note that when a debt relates to a contract regulated by the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (administered by the states and territories), a debtor may have a statutory right to a variation where certain conditions are met. Repayment negotiations generally, including hardship variations under the UCCC, are discussed in part 2, section 13, Repayment Negotiations below.

Part 2: Practical guidance

In this guideline, the term ‘debtor’ includes an alleged debtor, and the term ‘debt’ includes an alleged debt.

This part of the guideline is addressed directly to all involved in collection activity, whether as creditors, agents or assignees. In addition, reference is made to the specific responsibilities of creditors of contracted or assigned debts.

1. Contact for a reasonable purpose only

[a] Communications with the debtor must always be for a reasonable purpose, and should only occur to the extent necessary⁷.

[b] It may be necessary and reasonable for you to contact a debtor to:

- give information about the debtor’s account
- convey a demand for payment
- accurately explain the consequences of non-payment, including any legal remedies available to the collector/creditor, and any service restrictions that may apply in the case of utilities (for example, electricity)
- make arrangements for repayment of a debt
- put a settlement proposal or alternative payment arrangement to the debtor
- review existing arrangements after an agreed period
- ascertain why earlier attempts to contact the debtor have not been responded to within a reasonable period, if this is the case
- ascertain why an agreed repayment arrangement has not been complied with, if this is the case
- investigate whether the debtor has changed their residential location without informing you, when there are grounds for believing this has occurred
- sight, inspect or recover a security interest or for other similar purposes.⁸ You may also contact a debtor at the debtor’s request.

⁷ In addition, you should not pursue a person for a debt unless you have reasonable grounds for believing the person you contact is liable for the debt: see section 12 of part 2 of this guideline.

⁸ However, there are circumstances where further contact with a debtor may not or may no longer be appropriate: see sections 4, 12 and 14–15 of part 2 of this guideline.

[c] However, it is not reasonable or acceptable to contact a debtor to:

- frighten or intimidate the debtor
- demoralise, tire out or exhaust the debtor
- embarrass the debtor in front of other people or for other similar purposes. See further under part 2, section 16: Conduct towards the debtor, and part 2, section 17: Debtors at a special disadvantage.

2. Making contact with the debtor

[a] Under the privacy laws, collectors have obligations to protect the privacy of debtors.⁹ When making direct contact, your first task must always be to ensure the person you are dealing with is the debtor. This must be done every time you make contact before you divulge any information about the debt, the process for its recovery, your identity as collector, or other confidential information.

[b] The limits on disclosing information to third parties apply to the debtor's spouse, partner and/or family as much as they apply to other third parties.¹⁰

[c] Having established the debtor's identity, you should then identify who you are and whom you work for, and explain the purpose of the contact.

[d] When you make initial contact, you should also give at least basic information about the alleged debt, including the name of the creditor and any assignee of the debt, and details of the account and the amount claimed. A debtor may request further information or documentation of the debt: see part 2, section 10 below.

[e] Do not misrepresent your identity in any way—for example, do not falsely state or imply that you are or work for a solicitor, or are a court or government official.

[f] If on first contact the debtor denies liability for the debt or raises an issue indicating a dispute about the debt, you should also take the steps referred to in part 2, section 12, If liability is disputed.

3. Hours of contact

[a] Only contact the debtor or a third party at reasonable hours, taking into account their circumstances and reasonable wishes. You can normally assume that the following are appropriate contact times, subject to the qualifications set out:

⁹ Generally on privacy issues, see section 7, part 2 below.

¹⁰ In relation to authorised representatives, see part 2, section 8: When a debtor is represented below.

Reasonable contact times

These times apply to both debtors and third parties¹¹ and are the local times in the debtor's state or territory.

Contact by telephone	Monday to Friday	7:30 am – 9:00 pm
	Weekends	9:00 am – 9:00 pm
	Public Holidays	No contact ¹²
Face-to-face contact	Monday to Friday	9:00 am – 9:00 pm
	Weekends	9:00 am – 9:00 pm
	Public Holidays	No contact ¹³
All workplace contact	Debtor's normal working hours if known or 9:00 am–5:00 pm, weekdays

[b] We assume that contact will usually be by telephone. The above contact times for face-to-face contact, including contact at the debtor's workplace, need to be read in conjunction with the comments on face-to-face contact in part 2, section 6 below.

[c] Also, there may be reasons why contact during the above times is unreasonable, or contact outside of these times is reasonable. For instance, a debtor may ask that contact be made at other or more restricted times. This may be for a range of reasons. For example (these examples are illustrative only):

- the debtor is a shift worker
- the debtor is responsible for children and contact around meal times is not convenient
- the debtor does not wish to be contacted when other family members are present.

In these and other such cases, the reasonable wishes of the debtor should be respected, and contact limited to the times requested by the debtor.

¹¹ See definition of 'third party' in Appendix D: Glossary. Contact with debtors representatives such as financial counsellors and solicitors would normally occur during ordinary business hours.

¹² Note that s. 43 of the Fair Trading Act (SA) prohibits telephone calls or personal calls on a public holiday for the purpose of demanding payment.

¹³ Ibid.

[d] However, a collector may alter the time of contact if, having made reasonable efforts over a reasonable period of time to contact the debtor during normal hours or at the times requested by the debtor, the collector has not been able to do so.

4. Frequency of contact

[a] Debtors and third parties are entitled to be free from excessive communications from collectors. Communications must always be for a reasonable purpose, and should only occur to the extent necessary: see part 2, section 1 above. The guidance on frequency of communications that follows should be read subject to this general principle.

[b] References to the number of contacts with debtors should be read as the number of contacts per account, rather than per individual debtor. Thus, it may be acceptable to have a higher overall level of contact with an individual debtor if this contact relates to more than one account. Where possible, however, collectors should seek to discuss multiple accounts with a debtor during the one contact in order to avoid unnecessary communications.

Telephone contacts, letters and messages

[c] Unnecessary or unduly frequent contacts may amount to undue harassment of a debtor. We recommend that you do not contact a debtor more than three times per week, or 10 times per month at most and only when it is necessary to do so.¹⁴ This contact includes:

- speaking to the debtor by telephone—including contacts when the debtor terminates the call, and
- letters sent to the debtor.

[d] Unnecessary or unreasonable contact by means of email, or SMS or telephone messages (those left on a voicemail service, on an answering machine or with a third party) must also be avoided.

[e] Stop contacting efforts once you have reached the above limits unless the debtor asks for the contact, or there is some other legitimate reason for making a further contact (for example, if you are in the process of negotiating an agreement with a willing debtor).

[f] Once you have made contact, leave a reasonable interval before next contacting the debtor. Give the debtor time to respond to your previous communications, and/or to organise payments if this has been agreed.

¹⁴ Note that s. 31(2) of the Property and Motor Dealers (Commercial Agency Practice Code of Conduct) Regulation 2001 (Qld) prohibits unsolicited communication with a debtor more than twice a week.

Face-to-face contacts

[g] See our comments in part 2, section 6 below on when face-to-face contact with the debtor is appropriate. You should only make face-to-face contact when such contact is necessary and reasonable. In such cases, we recommend that you do not make more than one face-to-face contact with a debtor per fortnight (if contact with the debtor actually takes place).¹⁵

Third parties

[h] We recommend that you do not contact a third party to obtain location information more often than once every six months. Contact with third parties is discussed more generally in part 2, sections 7 and 18 below.

Undue harassment

[i] Unduly frequent contact designed to wear down or exhaust a debtor, or likely to have this effect, constitutes ‘undue harassment’ or coercion and must be avoided. This is particularly likely if the collector makes a number of phone calls or other contacts in rapid succession. The specific prohibition against undue harassment is discussed further in part 3 of this guideline.

Undue harassment explained

Justice Hill of the Federal Court has explained the meaning of undue harassment as follows:

The word harassment means in the present context persistent disturbance or torment. In the case of a person employed to recover money owing to others ... it can extend to cases where there are frequent unwelcome approaches requesting payment of a debt. However, such unwelcome approaches would not constitute undue harassment, at least where the demands made are legitimate and reasonably made. On the other hand where the frequency, nature or content of such communications is such that they are calculated to intimidate or demoralise, tire out or exhaust a debtor, rather than merely convey the demand for recovery, the conduct will constitute undue harassment. ... Generally it can be said that a person will be harassed by another when the former is troubled repeatedly by the latter. The reasonableness of the conduct will be relevant to whether what is harassment constitutes undue harassment.

ACCC v The Maritime Union of Australia [2001] FCA 1549

5. Location of contact

[j] In most cases, the debtor’s home will be the appropriate place to contact a debtor, with contact by telephone generally being the appropriate mode of contact. However, if a debtor provides a telephone (including mobile phone) contact number as the means of contact, contact using that number will be appropriate whatever the debtor's location. Face-to-face contact is considered in the next section.

¹⁵ In ACCC v Esanda Finance Corporation Ltd [2003] FCA 1225, the court ordered Esanda to restrict its agents to a total of five personal visits [for the period of collection] unless a visit was specifically requested by the customer or a repayment agreement had been made and subsequently breached (in which case a further five visits may be made).

[k] Sometimes, a debtor may not wish to be contacted at home. If the debtor asks to be contacted at an alternative and reasonable location, contact the debtor at that location.

[l] Any contact must not involve a breach of your privacy obligations to the debtor—see part 2, section 7, Privacy obligations to the debtor and third parties below.

6. Face-to-face contact

[m] We recommend that collectors only make personal or 'field' visits if reasonable efforts to contact a debtor by other less intrusive means have been unsuccessful, and face-to-face contact is necessary.

[n] Making a personal visit may be justified when a debtor refuses or fails to respond to other means of communication. Face-to-face contact may also be justified to verify the identity or location of a debtor when this is reasonably in doubt.

[o] Note—this guidance is not intended to limit otherwise legally permissible visits:

- for the purposes of sighting, inspecting or recovering security interests
- in relation to the serving of legal process, or
- for the enforcement of court orders.

Visiting the debtor's home

[p] Visits to a person's home will often raise issues about the privacy of the debtor and/or third parties. This sub-section should be read in conjunction with part 2, section 7 Privacy obligations to the debtor and third parties following. This subsection should also be read in conjunction with part 2, section 18 Conduct towards family members and third parties.

[q] We recommend the following when visiting a debtor's home:

- Generally, do not visit the debtor's home uninvited when it is possible to ask permission to visit the debtor. If the debtor refuses to agree to being visited, you must not visit them.¹⁶
- State clearly to the debtor the purpose of any visit before making the visit.

¹⁶ If you enter the debtor's premises having been instructed not to do so, you risk breaching tort or criminal trespass laws.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- Negotiate a mutually convenient time for the visit. Unless the debtor asks for another time, the proposed visiting times should be between 9 am–9 pm local time on all days except public holidays (when visits should not take place).¹⁷
- Before the visit takes place, allow the debtor time to seek advice, support and/or the presence of a third party if they choose.
- Do not visit the debtor's home if you know of special circumstances, (for example, the debtor is seriously ill or mentally incapacitated) which would make face-to-face contact inappropriate. Leave the debtor's premises immediately if you become aware of such circumstances during the visit.

[r] You must leave the debtor's premises immediately if, at any time, you are asked to do so. As well as breaching the prohibition on undue harassment and coercion¹⁸ refusing to leave someone's property on request is likely to constitute a breach of tort or criminal trespass laws. This applies to service or trades people claiming they are not permitted to leave a consumer's residence without receiving payment.

[s] Whether before or after visiting a debtor, or at any other time, do not stay in the vicinity of the debtor's home for an extended period of time, or engage in any other conduct that may suggest to the debtor or a third person that the debtor, or a member of the debtor's household, is under surveillance.

Visiting the debtor's workplace

[t] Visiting a debtor's workplace should only be undertaken as a last resort unless:

- the debtor is the proprietor or a director of a business to which the debt relates, or
- the debtor has specifically requested or agreed to the visit.

[u] If a debtor has asked that you do not visit them at their workplace, and has provided an alternative and effective means of communication, do not visit them at their workplace.

[v] Visiting a debtor at their workplace will always involve a risk of breaching the collector's privacy obligations to the debtor.¹⁹ Collectors will generally be asked to explain who they are and why they are visiting, and it will generally be difficult to provide an explanation without giving confidential information to third parties.

[w] In addition, visiting a debtor at their workplace uninvited may be seen as an attempt to put pressure on the debtor by embarrassing or threatening to embarrass him or her in front of work colleagues. If this is found to have occurred, such conduct is likely to constitute undue harassment or coercion of the debtor.

¹⁷ See part 2, section 3 above.

¹⁹ See part 2, section 7, Privacy Obligations to the debtor and third parties, below.

[x] If you do visit a debtor's workplace:

- under no circumstances reveal to a third party, whether directly or indirectly, that the visit is in connection with a debt²⁰
- under no circumstances discuss the debt in front of co-workers²¹
- leave immediately if, at any time, you are asked to do so by the debtor or another person.²²

[y] A visit to a debtor's workplace should be undertaken when you know the debtor will normally be at work. If you do not know the debtor's working hours, we recommend that you limit any visit to between 9 am and 5 pm, weekdays.

[z] Whether before or after visiting a debtor, or at any other time, do not stay in the vicinity of the debtor's workplace for an extended period, or engage in any other conduct that may suggest to the debtor or a third person that the debtor is under surveillance.

7. Privacy obligations to the debtor and third parties

[a] The following information on collectors' privacy obligations has been written in conjunction with the Office of the Privacy Commissioner, which has responsibility for privacy regulation at the Commonwealth level. See also under 'privacy laws' in Appendix B of this guideline.

[b] A debtor's personal information should always be treated with respect. The improper use of a debtor's personal information may cause that person serious difficulties. There are legal obligations under the Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) (the Privacy Act) designed to protect the privacy of a debtor's personal information.

Personal information means information or an opinion, whether it is true or not, about an individual that can reasonably allow the individual to be identified.²³

[c] A debtor's personal information may be regulated by the Privacy Act in a number of ways. For example, obtaining a debtor's contact details from their employer is ²⁰ Ibid.

²¹ Ibid.

²² If you do not leave the debtor's workplace when asked to do so, you risk breaching tort and/or criminal trespass laws. Also, in Victoria, the failure to leave a person's workplace when requested to do so is deemed to constitute undue harassment or coercion under section 21(2)(k) of the Fair Trading Act 1999 (Victoria).

²³ See s. 6 of the Privacy Act for the definition of 'personal information'.

collecting their personal information. Telling a debtor's neighbour the reason for trying to find the debtor might be disclosing personal information about the debtor.²⁴

Collecting and disclosing the debtor's personal information

[d] Information handling by private sector organisations such as creditors and debt collectors is regulated, in part, by the National Privacy Principles (the NPPs).²⁵ There are several key obligations around information handling:

- Collect information directly from the debtor whenever possible
- Only collect information that is necessary to recover the debt—for example, do not write down extra information about the debtor from an identifying document because it might be useful
- Collect information by fair means
- When the debtor's information is collected, whether from a creditor or from the debtor, take reasonable steps to let the debtor know that it has been collected and what is going to be done with it²⁶
- When making inquiries about a debtor from a neighbour or an employer, do not disclose information about the debtor, for example, by indicating that you are collecting a debt
- For the same reason, be careful about what information is contained in messages left on answering machines.

[e] Generally, personal information should only be used and disclosed for the purpose for which it was collected. There are some limited exceptions to this rule.

What you should do with the debtor's personal information

[f] Remember the following:

- If the information is no longer needed destroy it
- If you keep the information for any time, make sure it is accurate, complete and up-to-date
- If the information is kept for any time, ensure it is secure against loss or unauthorised handling

²⁵ For the NPPs, see <http://www.privacy.gov.au/publications/npps01.html> ; and the NPP Guidelines generally on how the NPPs are applied.

²⁶ Advice about what steps might be reasonable in certain circumstances can be found in the NPP Guidelines at http://www.privacy.gov.au/publications/nppgl_01.html

- If the debtor wants to see their information they have a right to do so and to correct it if it is wrong.

Obligations in relation to consumer credit reports

[g] Part IIIA of the Privacy Act also regulates the handling of personal information contained in consumer credit reports²⁷. Credit providers, creditors and debt collectors should take care as to what information from a credit report is made available to a debt collector for the purposes of recovering a debt. For example, a credit provider should not disclose to a debt collector a credit report or any information from a credit report apart from:

- details about the debt
- the name and addresses of the debtor
- any court judgements or bankruptcy orders against the debtor²⁸.

[h] There are rules about when a debtor may have a default listed with a credit reporting agency, and who may make such a listing²⁹. For example, when a debtor's default has already been listed with a credit reporting agency, that default listing should only be updated to reflect who is currently responsible for the debt, rather than being separately listed again.

8. When a debtor is represented

[a] A debtor has a right to have an authorised representative (such as a financial counsellor, financial advisor, community worker, solicitor, guardian or carer) represent them or advocate on their behalf about a debt.

[b] Except in the circumstances outlined in the next paragraph, you should not:

- contact a debtor directly after you know, or should know, that the debtor is represented, or
- refuse to deal with an appointed or authorised representative, whether by direct refusal or by placing unnecessary obstacles in the way of the authorised

Part 2: Practical guidance

representative, e.g. by insisting on a particular style or form of authorisation when the written authority provided already includes the necessary information.³⁰

[c] You are entitled to contact a debtor directly if:

- the representative does not respond to your communications within a reasonable time (normally, 14 days)
- the representative advises that they do not have instructions from the debtor about the debt
- the representative does not consent to act
- the debtor specifically requests direct communication with you, or
- the representative is not a solicitor and you advise that written authority stating that you are to communicate through the debtor's representative is required, and the debtor or their representative does not provide that authority.

[d] When an authorised representative does not agree to have written correspondence redirected to the representative, such correspondence should continue to be sent directly to the debtor.

9. Keeping accurate records

[a] Accurate record keeping by all parties is vital to promptly resolving disputes allowing collectors and debtors to limit or avoid costly collection activity.

[b] Collectors should ensure:

- they maintain accurate, complete and up-to-date records of all communications with debtors, including the time, date and nature of calls about the alleged debt, records of any visits in person, and records of all correspondence sent
- all payments made are accurately recorded (including details of date, amount and payment method).

[c] Creditors should ensure:

- collectors are provided with accurate, up-to-date information about assigned or contracted debts³¹

³⁰ In general, any form of authority consistent with requirements of the Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) should be regarded as acceptable.

³¹ Note, however, that there are limits on information mercantile agents are permitted to receive from credit providers under Part IIIA, Privacy Act 1988. More generally on privacy issues see part 2, section 7 above.

- retained information and documentation is able to be accessed and forwarded to collectors in a prompt and efficient manner
- settled debts are not assigned or contracted out for collection.

Recording debt settlements

[d] Creditors and collectors have a responsibility for ensuring that:

- settlements are fully documented in relevant files and computer systems, and
- before tranches of debts are assigned, sold or contracted out for collection, all reasonable steps are taken to ensure settled debts are not included.

[e] Once a debt is settled, any credit reporting agency report on the debtor must be updated appropriately.³²

10. Providing information and documents

[a] Requests by debtors for information and/or documentation relating to an account should not be ignored.

[b] In certain circumstances, failure to provide information may constitute misleading and deceptive conduct or unconscionable conduct.

[c] If a debt relates to a consumer loan or credit card facility regulated by the Uniform Consumer Credit Code,³³ there are specific obligations to provide information and documents on request. These are set out in the following sections of the Code:

- Section 34 (Statement of amount owing and other matters)³⁴
- Section 36 (Disputed accounts)³⁵

³² More generally on credit reporting, see part 2, section 7: Privacy obligations to the debtor and third parties.

³⁴ Information to be provided to the debtor or loan guarantor if requested under s. 34(1), UCCC:

- (a) the current balance of the debtor's account
- (b) any amounts credited or debited during a period specified in the request
- (c) any amounts currently overdue and when such amount became due
- (d) any amount currently payable and the date it became due.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- Section 76 (Statement of payout figure),³⁶ and
- Section 163 (Copies of contracts and other documents).³⁷

[d] In addition, subscribers to industry codes of conduct may be subject to information and document disclosure requirements.³⁸ Debtors also have a right to access personal information held about them under National Privacy Principle 6 (subject to certain limits).³⁹

[e] If a debtor requests information about an amount claimed as owing, or how that amount has been calculated, the debtor should normally be provided with an itemised statement of account clearly specifying:

- the amount of the alleged debt and how it is calculated, and
- details of all payments made and all amounts (including principal, interest, fees and charges) owing.

[f] Debtors should also be provided with copies of contracts and related documents if these are requested.⁴⁰

[g] Information and documents should be provided in a timely fashion. The Uniform Consumer Credit Code sets out time frames to be complied with when the debt relates to a consumer loan or credit card facility.⁴¹ These time frames also provide a guide to what is reasonable for accounts that are not UCCC-regulated.

³⁵ If a particular liability is disputed in writing, the credit provider must explain in writing in reasonable detail how the liability arises: s. 36(1), UCCC, ³⁶ In response to a written request from a debtor or loan guarantor, a credit provider must provide a statement of the amount required to pay out a loan (other than a continuing credit contract facility) at a particular date. Details of items that make up this amount must also be provided if requested: s. 76(1), UCCC.

³⁷ This section covers loan contracts, mortgages, guarantees, credit-related insurance contracts in the credit provider's possession, and notices previously given.

³⁸ For example, subscribers to the Code of Banking Practice (available at www.bankers.asn.au) must comply with Code requirements relating to provision of copies of documents (cl. 11) and statements of account (cl. 24).

³⁹ More generally, see part 2, section 7 above.

⁴⁰ The provision of a copy of the contract can also assist if a debt has been incurred with a business operating under a trading name that is different to the creditor name supplied to the debtor.

⁴¹ Under s. 34 (2), UCCC, a statement must be provided within 14 days if all information requested relates to a period 1 year or less before the request is given. Otherwise, a 30-day timeframe applies. Having provided a written statement, a credit provider is not required to provide a further statement if requested for a 3-month period: s. 34(4), UCCC. Similar timeframes apply to the provision of documents under s. 163, UCCC.

[h] Creditors are responsible for ensuring they are able to provide retained information and documentation promptly to their agents and assignees, thereby allowing collectors to respond to debtors' information requests within statutorily-required or otherwise reasonable timeframes.⁴²

[i] Except for undisputed amounts, all collection activity should be suspended until the account information and/or documents requested have been provided to the debtor. See part 2, section 12 below.

11. Consistent and appropriate correspondence

[a] Your written correspondence—including automatically generated letters—should be consistent with both your records and your verbal communications with the debtor, and visa versa.

[b] Letters and other correspondence should reflect the repayment arrangements that you and/or the creditor have made with the debtor.⁴³ Such correspondence must not make representations about:

- the frequency of contact that are not accurate (for example, state that ‘numerous attempts have been made to contact you by telephone’ or ‘numerous previous letters have been sent’ if this is not the case), or
- liability or the amount owing that are not accurate (for example, state or imply that a debtor is liable for collection charges or fees that you are not legally entitled to claim; or demand payment for an amount that does not account for payments already made).

[c] It is not appropriate to send reminders or other correspondence about the consequences of non-payment (including automatically generated letters) when:

- a temporary stay of action or enforcement has been granted
- the creditor/collector has not provided the information they agreed to provide (whether or not liability for the debt has been disputed), or
- court proceedings in relation to the debt have been commenced.⁴⁴

⁴² Note, however, that Part IIIA, Privacy Act limits the information mercantile agents are permitted to receive from a credit provider. More generally on privacy issues, see section 6, part 2 above.

⁴³ See part 2, sections 13 and 14 below in relation to repayment negotiations.

⁴⁴ See part 2, section 21 for a more general discussion of legal action and procedures.

12. If liability is disputed

[a] You must not pursue a person for a debt unless you have reasonable grounds for believing the person you contact is liable for the debt.⁴⁵

[b] If a person you contact about an alleged debt claims that:

- they are not the alleged debtor, or
- the alleged debt has been paid or otherwise settled

you must suspend further collection activity until the debtor's identity and ongoing liability have been confirmed.

[c] If you continue with collection activity without properly investigating claims that a debt is not owed, you are at considerable risk of breaching one or more of the legal prohibitions of the Commonwealth laws if the alleged debtor is not in fact liable for the debt.

[d] It is misleading to state or imply that the alleged debtor must prove they are not liable for the debt. In legal proceedings, proof of the debt lies with the person alleging the debt is owed to them.

[e] If the creditor and/or collector is not able to establish the debtor's ongoing liability for the alleged debt when challenged, collection activity should cease. Creditors should also consider providing a letter of acknowledgement where no information can be produced to support a claim that a debt is owed.

[f] If the parties are unable to resolve a dispute about liability for a debt or the amount owed, a creditor or collector may have an obligation to advise the debtor of internal or external dispute resolution processes available to the debtor—see further under part 2, section 22, Resolving Complaints and Disputes, and section 23, The role of external dispute resolution schemes below.

Formal denial of liability

[g] Subject to the next paragraph, further communication with a debtor after the debtor has formally denied liability and/or stated an intention to defend any legal proceedings brought against them is not appropriate. In these circumstances, you have the option of commencing legal proceedings if you choose to pursue the debt.

[h] However, further communication may be appropriate after a formal denial of liability:

- to advise the debtor in writing of the steps you intend to take towards legal proceedings

⁴⁵ For example, you should not send letters requesting payment or alleging a debt is owed to a person or group of persons who may only share a name or surname with the person who incurred the debt.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- to put a genuine proposal in writing for settlement of the matter
- when further communication is subsequently authorised or requested by the debtor.

[i] Further communication about any other debt, or any part of a debt that is not denied, remains appropriate.

[j] If a debtor verbally denies an alleged debt and you require a written denial before you stop contact, tell the debtor of this requirement.

[k] If a court judgment is obtained for a debt for which liability had been denied, you are entitled to start or resume communication with the debtor for that judgment debt (assuming the judgment has not been set aside).

13. Repayment negotiations

[a] We encourage creditors and collectors to work with debtors and to adopt a flexible and realistic approach to repayment arrangements. This includes:

- making reasonable allowance for a debtor's ongoing living expenses
- recognising that debtors in difficulties will often have a number of debts owing to different creditors.

[b] Debtors experiencing financial hardship in relation to their consumer loans or credit card facilities may have a right to apply for a variation or change of their repayment arrangements on the grounds of hardship under the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (UCCC).⁴⁶

[c] In addition, the Code of Banking Practice obliges subscribing banks to help debtors overcome their financial difficulties and advise them of any rights they may have under the UCCC.⁴⁷

[d] You must not mislead the debtor in the context of repayment negotiations. For instance, you must not:

⁴⁶ Under s. 66, UCCC, a debtor unable reasonably to meet their obligations (because of illness, unemployment or other reasonable cause) can apply to their lender to extend the loan repayment period and reduce their periodic payments and/or to postpone payments for a period. If the lender does not agree to the variation proposed, the debtor can apply to a court or tribunal with jurisdiction to hear applications: s. 68, UCCC. State and territory fair agencies can assist debtors with hardship change applications: see Appendix C for a list of agencies. This regime is subject to a maximum 'floating threshold' linked to the cost of housing: for more information, search under 'hardship threshold' at www.creditcode.gov.au. State and territory Fair Trading or Consumer Affairs agencies can assist debtors with hardship change applications: see Appendix C for contact details.

⁴⁷ Section 25.2 of the Code of Banking Practice states in part: With your agreement, we will try to help you overcome your financial difficulties with any credit facility you have with us. We could, for example, work with you to develop a repayment plan.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- advise a debtor that you do not, or are unable to enter into payment arrangements when this is not the case
- mislead a debtor about his or her right to seek a repayment variation when such a right exists. (In some circumstances failure to advise the debtor of their rights may in itself amount to misleading and deceptive conduct.)

[e] It is also unacceptable to pressurise a debtor:

- to pay in full, in unreasonably large instalments, or to increase payments when they are unable to do so
- to get further into debt in order to pay out an existing debt, or
- to show proof of unsuccessful alternative credit applications before a repayment plan will be negotiated.

[f] Once negotiated, an arrangement to repay a debt should normally be put in writing and a copy provided to the debtor. We recommend that this be done for all periodic payment arrangements intended to remain in place for more than 14 days.⁴⁸

[g] Once finalised, repayment arrangements should be given a chance to work—see the next section.

14. Contact when a payment arrangement is in place

[a] Generally, while an arrangement is in place, do not contact the debtor unless:

- the debtor asks you to
- you wish to propose a genuine alternative or variant arrangement to benefit the debtor, or
- the debtor does not comply with the terms of the agreement.

[b] However, you should continue to send the debtor regular account statements.

[c] You are entitled to contact a debtor to review an informal arrangement that was made subject to review. However, repayment reviews should not be excessively frequent—we recommend a minimum of three months between reviews unless a further default occurs sooner.

⁴⁸ Where the debt relates to an account regulated by the Uniform Consumer Credit Code, an agreement that defers or otherwise reduces the debtor's obligations for more than 90 days must be put in writing and given to the debtor. s. 65, UCCC.

15. Contact following bankruptcy or a Bankruptcy Act agreement

[a] For information about bankruptcy, including the effect of bankruptcy and Bankruptcy Act agreements on creditors, contact the Insolvency Trustee Service Australia (ITSA), which administers the Act.⁴⁹ Alternatively, visit the ITSA website.⁵⁰ The following information has been prepared in conjunction with ITSA.

[b] Under the Bankruptcy Act an unsecured creditor⁵¹ may lodge a proof of debt with the bankrupt's trustee. With limited exceptions set out in the Act, an unsecured creditor may not:

- take or continue legal action or allow recovery action to continue against the bankrupt person, or
- take any remedy against the person or property of the bankrupt.

[c] A creditor or collector must also cease all informal collection activity against a bankrupt person for an unsecured debt.

[d] Attempting to persuade a bankrupt person that they should or must pay an unsecured debt covered by the bankruptcy will constitute misleading and deceptive conduct under the consumer protection laws.⁵² Contacting a bankrupt about such a debt may also amount to harassment of the debtor and/or unconscionable conduct.

[e] Secured creditors⁵³ (including their agents) are entitled to take possession of secured assets and sell these if the bankrupt person is in default. Thus, contacting a bankrupt debtor to sight, inspect and/or recover a security interest is permissible as long as the contact is otherwise consistent with the law.

[f] In certain circumstances, too, a bankrupt person may agree to pay a secured creditor in order to keep an asset. Ongoing communication with the bankrupt in connection with such an arrangement is also permissible.

[g] Apart from becoming a bankrupt, in certain circumstances a debtor may enter into a Part IX debt agreement or Part X personal insolvency agreement under the Bankruptcy Act. These agreements involve a process by which a debtor makes a proposal to the creditors. If this proposal is formally accepted by the creditors, both debtor and creditors

⁴⁹ For contact details, see Appendix C of this guideline.

⁵⁰ The ITSA web site is: www.itsa.gov.au. ITSA has published Information for Creditors about Bankruptcy (June 2004) available from the ITSA site.

⁵¹ A creditor who does not hold a mortgage, bill of sale or other security over an asset that can be sold if the debt is not paid.

⁵² Where a person is bankrupt, the debt may be recoverable from the bankrupt's estate. In this case, the trustee of the bankrupt estate, and not the bankrupt themselves, should be contacted.

⁵³ A creditor who holds a mortgage, bill of sale or other security over an asset that can be sold if the debt is not paid.

are bound by it and creditors cannot enforce remedies to recover their debts as long as the agreements are valid and are not declared void by a court or otherwise terminated. As with bankruptcy, secured creditors' rights are not affected by these agreements.⁵⁴

[h] Unsecured creditors (or their agents) should contact the trustee of a bankrupt estate, or the administrator of a Part IX or Part X agreement for information about the possibility of recovering their debt.

16. Conduct towards the debtor

[a] A debtor is entitled to respect and courtesy, and must not be subject to misleading, humiliating or intimidating conduct. Such conduct is likely to breach the Commonwealth consumer protection laws, and may breach other laws as well.

[b] Do not:

- use abusive, offensive, obscene, or discriminatory language
- make disrespectful or demeaning remarks about a debtor's character, situation in life, physical appearance, intelligence or other characteristics or circumstances
- embarrass or shame a debtor—for example, by sending open correspondence to a shared post-box, making the debtor's employer or co-workers aware that the debtor is being pursued for a debt, or creating an impression that the debtor is under surveillance⁵⁵
- adopt an aggressive, threatening or intimidating manner—for example by shouting at or continually interrupting the debtor, or by refusing to listen to what the debtor has to say
- threaten to use, or use, violence or physical force against a debtor, third party or against property⁵⁶
- mislead a debtor about the nature or extent of a debt, or the consequences of non-payment.⁵⁷

[c] Inappropriate behaviour by a debtor does not justify unprofessional conduct by the collector.

[d] Where possible, the collector should attempt to diffuse such behaviour and refocus discussion on the outstanding debt and arrangements for its repayment. Debtor ⁵⁴ Further information is available on the ITSA web site at www.itsa.gov.au.

⁵⁵ Such actions may also involve a breach of the collector's privacy obligations to the debtor: see part 2, section 7 above.

⁵⁶ Such threats or actions may also constitute criminal conduct.

⁵⁷ See further under part 2, sections 19–21 below.

frustration and/or anger is more likely to be contained where viable and achievable repayment arrangements are proposed. In the event of violence or other extreme conduct, the appropriate response is to cease contact immediately and refer the matter to the police.

Case study

A company was found to have breached the prohibitions against harassment and coercion when its agents pinned a man to the ground during a vehicle seizure, even though the company had a contractual right to seize a debtor's vehicle. The court found this to be the case notwithstanding the fact that the man threatened the agents with assault.

ACCC v Davis [2003] FCA 1227

17. Debtors at a special disadvantage

[a] As with other people involved in trade and commerce, collectors must not engage in unconscionable conduct. Collectors are at risk of breaching this prohibition if they take advantage of the disability, weakness or vulnerability of a specially disadvantaged or vulnerable person.

[b] Under the general law, 'special disadvantage' means that the consumer has a condition or is in a circumstance that seriously affects their ability to judge what is in their best interests. Factors that may give rise to a special disadvantage include:

- ignorance of important facts known to the staff or agent of the business
- illiteracy or lack of education
- poverty or need of any kind
- the consumer's age
- infirmity of body or mind
- drunkenness
- lack of explanation and assistance where necessary.⁵⁸

[c] The statutory prohibition of unconscionable conduct, which builds on the general law concept, is considered further in part 3 of this guideline.⁵⁹ It requires courts to consider all the circumstances of the case, including a number of specific factors such as ⁵⁸ See Blomley v Ryan (1956) 99 CLR 362, Commercial Bank of Australia v Amadio (1983) 151 CLR 447.

⁵⁹ See Part 3, Prohibition of unconscionable conduct.

Part 2: Practical guidance

whether undue influence has been exerted, or unfair tactics have been adopted, towards the consumer or a third party.

[d] You should consider whether any circumstances of special disadvantage or vulnerability apply in the case of a debtor whom you contact. If it appears they do, make sure you interact with the debtor in a way that does not take advantage of their disadvantage. Otherwise, your conduct is likely to be regarded as unconscionable and in breach of the law.

[e] When you know or suspect a debtor lacks knowledge of the law, the debt recovery process, or the implications of non-payment of a debt, you must not take advantage of their ignorance.

[f] Depending on the circumstances, it may be appropriate to encourage the disadvantaged debtor to seek the assistance of a family member to support them, or a financial counsellor to act on their behalf.

Non-English speaking debtors

[g] For someone who cannot speak English, appropriate interaction requires that the debtor can understand you. The assistance of an English-speaking family member or friend to translate may be able to be sought, but only if the debtor proposes or agrees to this.⁶⁰ Otherwise, a professional interpreter will need to be engaged.⁶¹

18. Conduct towards family members and other third parties

[a] You must not try to pressure a debtor by misleading, harassing, threatening or putting pressure on a debtor's spouse or partner, or a member of the debtor's family (especially a child) or other third parties.

[b] All communication with third parties, including members of the debtor's family, must be consistent with the collector's privacy obligations to the debtor and the third party. See the discussion of privacy obligations to the debtor and third parties at part 2, section 7 above.

[c] Communication with a third party to:

- suggest or imply that the third party is liable for the debt when that person has no legal obligation to pay
- suggest or imply that the third party should try and persuade the debtor to pay the debt, or that the third party should themselves pay the debt
- put pressure on the debtor indirectly by involving the third party

⁶⁰ On the use of children (under 18 years) as translators, see the next section.

⁶¹ The Department of Immigration and Multicultural and Indigenous Affairs provides a 24 hours a day, 7 days a week Translating and Interpreting service accessible on 131 450. User fees generally apply.

- embarrass or distress the debtor or for other similar purposes, is likely to amount to a breach the consumer protection laws.

[d] The standard for acceptable conduct towards third parties is, if anything, even higher than that applying to the debtor.

[e] Where it is appropriate to communicate with a third party, do so by telephone or other non-intrusive means wherever possible.⁶² Only visit a third party at their home or other location when no other means of making contact is available, for example, when you only have or can only reasonably obtain an address.

[f] Attempting to get information about a debtor from a third party under false pretences, for example, by pretending to be an associate or friend of the debtor, constitutes misleading and deceptive conduct and is prohibited by law.

[g] A third party is not obliged to give you information, nor agree to leave a message for a debtor, or otherwise help you. If a third party indicates they do not want to help you—however unreasonable that refusal may seem to you—stop contacting the third party.

Communication with the debtor's child

[a] Attempting to pressurise a debtor by instigating unauthorised communication with the debtor's child, or by making threats in relation to the debtor's child (for example, threatening to report the debtor to the Department of Community Services) is likely to constitute undue harassment or coercion and/or unconscionable conduct within the meaning of the consumer protection laws, and is entirely unacceptable behaviour.

[b] A collector should never communicate with a debtor's child (under the age of 18) about a debt, unless:

- communication with that child is specifically authorised and initiated by the debtor or
- the debtor, on their own initiative, asks the child to act as a translator.⁶³

19. Representations about the consequences of non-payment

[a] This section should be read in conjunction with part 2, sections 20 and 21 below.

⁶² On the hours and frequency of contact with third parties, see part 2, section 3: Hours of contact and section 4: Frequency of contact above.

⁶³ Note that in Victoria, any communication with a person under the age of 18 in relation to a debt (if the person is not the debtor) is deemed to constitute undue harassment or coercion under section 21(2)(k) of the Fair Trading Act 1999 (Victoria).

Part 2: Practical guidance

[b] Misrepresenting the consequences of non-payment of a debt is an offence. Misrepresentation may also increase the risk of breaching laws against unconscionable conduct when the debtor is in a position of special disadvantage or vulnerability.⁶⁴

[c] You must not threaten legal action if the commencement of proceedings is not possible, or not under consideration, or you do not have instructions to commence proceedings.

[d] Conversely, you must not state or imply that action will not be taken when the commencement of proceedings is intended or under consideration.

Case studies

A company sent a debtor a letter implying that they would not or could not lawfully repossess a car without a court order, but then proceeded to repossess the car without this order. The court found this to be a contributing factor towards a finding of unconscionable conduct.

ACCC v Esanda Finance Corporation Ltd [2003] FCA 1225

A collection officer told a debtor by phone to accept a letter that was being delivered, and that no action would be taken. When the debtor contacted the collection officer through an authorised representative (a financial counsellor), they found that the collector had issued a Statement of Liquidated Claim and intended to proceed to judgement on the debt.

[e] Do not state or imply that:

- immediate possession will be taken of a debtor's home or other property when the debt is not secured by the property, or the creditor has not obtained judgment in respect of the debt and is able to take such action
- unsecured goods may be seized and sold without further legal action being taken
- unsecured basic household items can be seized if the debtor is made bankrupt⁶⁵
- additional fees or charges will be added to the debt if payment is not made, if such fees or charges are not permitted by law⁶⁶, or ⁶⁴ See part 2, section 17: Debtors at a special disadvantage above.

⁶⁵ Section 116 of the Bankruptcy Act 1966 excludes these items from seizure by creditors.

⁶⁶ For example, section 38 of the Private Agents Act 1966 (Vic) sets a statutory limit on the charges and costs that a commercial agent may charge, recover or receive from a debtor. Similarly, section 347 of the Property Agents and Motor Dealers Act 2000 (Qld) prohibits the recovery of a commercial agent's fees or charges (besides stamp duty and costs fixed by or payable under the rules of a court or a court order) in the absence of an agreement with the debtor allowing such recovery, and subject to the Consumer Credit Code.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- additional fees or charges will be added to the debt where there is no contractual right to add these.

[f] Do not state or imply that:

- failure to pay a debt is a criminal matter where no fraud or other offence is involved
- a matter will be referred to the police when there is no intention to make such a referral
- criminal proceedings may be commenced by the creditor or agent or other private person themselves.

Credit reporting

[g] Do not state or imply that you intend to list a debt with a credit reporting service when:

- you do not have a genuine belief that the debtor is liable for the debt
- you have no instructions to list the debt, and/or it is not your intention to do so
- listing is not permitted by law or under a mandatory code,⁶⁷ or
- the debt has already been listed.

[h] Equally, while it is appropriate to point out the possible consequences of a credit listing, you must not make misleading representations about those consequences.

[i] Generally, it is not appropriate to make an adverse credit listing when you are aware that the debtor or alleged debtor has filed process with a tribunal or court disputing liability for the debt in part or in full.

[j] For more general information on credit reporting obligations, see part 2, section 7, Privacy obligations to the debtor and third parties.

20. Representations about the legal status of a debt—including statute-barred debt

[a] This section should be read with part 2, section 19 above, and part 2, section 21 below.

[b] Collectors should not state or imply that a debt is payable when a defence at law applies. Among other defences, a debtor will be able to claim a defence if:

- the debtor has been declared bankrupt⁶⁸ and the debt(s) is unsecured, or ⁶⁷ For example, provision 2.8 of the Credit Reporting Code of Conduct prohibits the listing of statute-barred debts.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- the right to pursue the debt in court has expired due to the passage of time. This time limit varies from state to state, but is usually six years from the date the debt was last acknowledged by the debtor (for example, by making a payment).

[c] Do not make misrepresentations that a statute-barred debt is payable as such representations may be considered:

- misleading and/or deceptive when the statutory time limit has passed, or
- unconscionable when the debtor has not had the opportunity to obtain independent advice (even if the debtor has not expressly claimed the defence).

[d] The Credit Reporting Code of Conduct prohibits the listing of statute barred debts.⁶⁹

Case study

An unemployed mother of a deaf, dependent child was cold-called by a collector who questioned her about her personal and financial circumstances. The collector implied that legal proceedings may be instituted if no payment was made on a debt of $10 000 that, unknown to the debtor, was statute-barred. The court found the collector's conduct to be unconscionable and noted that the circumstances were sufficient to require the collector to establish that the transaction was fair, just and reasonable—which the collector did not do.

Collection House v Taylor [2004] VSC 49 Supreme Court of Victoria

21. Legal action and procedures

[a] This section should be read in conjunction with part 2, sections 19 and 20 above.

[b] Creditors and their agents have a right to pursue debts through the courts. However, in pursuing or threatening to pursue legal action you must comply with the Commonwealth consumer protection laws.

[c] Do not make misrepresentations about the legal process. For instance, do not:

- misrepresent the nature or purpose of correspondence. Ensure the layout, wording and design of documents (for example, letters of demand) are not likely to create the impression that they are court process or other court documents, or that they come from a solicitor's office, when this is not the case
- suggest that telephone calls are recorded 'for training purposes' (and, by implication, only for such purposes) when those calls may also be used as evidence

⁶⁸ Alternatively, the debtor has entered into a Part IX debt agreement or a Part X personal insolvency agreement under the Bankruptcy Act: see part 2, section 15 above.

⁶⁹ ibid.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- misrepresent that failure to pay a debt (where no fraud is involved) is a criminal or police matter, or is likely to be referred to the police
- state or imply that unsecured basic household items can be seized if the debtor is made bankrupt⁷⁰
- state or imply that you have instructions to start legal proceedings when this is not intended, or you have received no such instructions
- state or imply that legal action has already been taken, or judgment entered, when this is not case.

[d] In certain circumstances the way legal action is threatened or employed can amount to unconscionable conduct or harassment. For instance, this may be the case if you start or escalate court action against a debtor when you have agreed not to, or when a payment arrangement is in place and is being complied with.

[e] You should also avoid unreasonably hindering a debtor's ability to contest court proceedings. For example, you should issue proceedings in the jurisdiction where the debtor lives if you know or can reasonably obtain this information.⁷¹

Case study

A collector breached misleading and deceptive conduct provisions by representing that they were about to sell a debtor's residence to obtain payment, when they had not started any legal proceedings at the time. They also breached these provisions by making baseless claims that they would have the debtor arrested by the police or the Fraud Squad.

ACCC v McCaskey [2000] FCR 1037.

22. Resolving debtor complaints and disputes

[a] Complaints and disputes must not be ignored. Creditors and collectors must have effective internal processes in place for logging, assessing, and where appropriate taking timely action in response to them. Staff need to be trained to identify complaints and disputes, and to ensure that established procedures are followed in dealing with them.

[b] It is not acceptable to require that a complaint be in writing, and/or explicitly identified as such by the complainant, before the complaint is considered or investigated.

⁷⁰ Section 116 of the Bankruptcy Act 1966 excludes these items from seizure by creditors.

⁷¹ It is appreciated that a last known address may be the only information a creditor has or can reasonably obtain. In this case, the appropriate jurisdiction to commence proceedings will be the jurisdiction of that location.

[c] Entities providing financial services to retail clients who are required under the Corporations Act 2001 to have an Australian financial services licence (including banks, credit unions building societies) must have an ASIC-approved dispute resolution system, including internal dispute resolution [IDR] procedures, in place.⁷² ASIC requires that licensees' IDR procedures satisfy the Essential Elements of Australian Standard AS 4269:1995 and be appropriately documented.⁷³ Complaints handling standards may also be imposed as a condition of membership of an industry code or external dispute resolution scheme.

[d] Generally, we recommend that all creditors and collectors have in place internal complaint handling processes that are, at least, consistent with the Australian Standard AS 2469:1995.

23. The role of independent external dispute resolution schemes

[a] Many creditor organisations (including telecommunications companies, utility suppliers and financial services businesses) belong to an independent external dispute resolution [EDR] scheme.⁷⁴ Specialist collection and debt buy-out agencies, and other finance providers, may also decide to join a scheme. Belonging to an EDR scheme is a legal requirement for some creditors.⁷⁵

[b] The ACCC and ASIC support the role played by EDR schemes in resolving consumer complaints and disputes when these are unable to be resolved through the creditor or collector's internal dispute resolution processes.

[c] We urge creditors and collectors to ensure their systems and practices allow EDR in the debt collection area to work effectively. In particular:

- Creditors and collectors must advise debtors of the existence, where applicable, of an EDR scheme to which the debtor can take his or her dispute if it cannot be resolved through the collector or agent's internal processes. Ensuring this information is provided to debtors is invariably a requirement imposed on EDR scheme members, and may be stipulated under applicable laws or codes.

⁷² Sections 912A(1)(g) & 912A(2)(a), Corporations Act 2001.

⁷³ See ASIC Policy Statement 165, at 165.10. As part of the ASIC requirements, licensees must also have a system for informing complainants about the availability and accessibility of the relevant external dispute resolution scheme to which licensee belongs. See part 2, section 23 below.

⁷⁴ For a list of relevant Ombudsman schemes, see Appendix C of this Guideline.

⁷⁵ These include banks, building societies and credit unions providing financial services to retail clients who must belong to one or more ASIC-approved EDR schemes as a requirement of their financial services licence: see sections 912A(1)(g) and 912A(2)(b), Corporations Act 2001. ASIC Policy Statement PS 139 sets out ASIC requirements for scheme approval. A list of approved schemes can be obtained at www.asic.gov.au.

Part 2: Practical guidance

- Collection activity relating to a dispute that has been referred to an EDR scheme must be suspended while the scheme considers the dispute. Again, this is an invariable requirement imposed on scheme members (including their agents).
- A debt should not be sold, or passed to an external agent for collection, while a scheme is considering a dispute in relation to it.
- If a debt is inadvertently sold, the assignor/creditor should seek to retrieve the debt from the assignee, and/or seek to ensure that the assignee does not undertake collection activity or commence legal proceedings until the scheme has resolved the dispute (and, then, only if liability is confirmed).

[d] Note that a creditor may remain subject to the jurisdiction of an EDR scheme in relation to a debt matter even though the creditor has sold or assigned the debt in question. This is likely to be the case where the complaint relates to the period before the sale or assignment of the debt.

[e] The ACCC and ASIC encourage EDR schemes to have regard to this guideline when determining how the consumer protection laws we administer should be applied to particular debt collection-related matters.

Part 3: Commonwealth consumer protection laws

This section summarises key prohibitions and remedies under Commonwealth consumer protection laws applicable to collection activity. Relevant court decisions about the Trade Practices Act provisions also apply to equivalent ASIC Act provisions.⁷⁶

See appendix B for other statutory and common law obligations and remedies.

Prohibition of the use of physical force, undue harassment and coercion

Section 60 Trade Practices Act

A corporation shall not use physical force, undue harassment or coercion in connection with the supply or possible supply of goods or services to a consumer or the payment for goods or services by a consumer.

Section 12DJ ASIC Act

A person contravenes this subsection if:

- (a) the person uses physical force or undue harassment or coercion; and
- (b) the person uses such force, harassment or coercion in connection with the supply or possible supply of financial services to a consumer or the payment for financial services by a consumer.

Under s. 60 Trade Practices Act, and s. 12DJ ASIC Act, the use of:

- physical force
- undue harassment and/or
- coercion

to support a demand for payment for goods or services/financial services is deemed unacceptable and is prohibited. These provisions are not limited to conduct directed at a debtor. They also apply to the collector's conduct towards a third party (for instance, a family member).

The terms 'physical force', 'harassment' and 'coercion' are not defined in the law. They should be understood in the way they are ordinarily used and defined (see below).

⁷⁶ Cassidy v Saatchi & Saatchi Australia Pty Ltd [2004] FCAFC 34.

Physical force

There is no definition of ‘undue’ physical force under s. 60 of the Trade Practices Act, and s. 12DJ of the ASIC Act. Any use of any violence or physical force is prohibited. The use of force may also be a criminal offence under state and territory criminal law.

In ACCC v Davis and *ACCC v Capalaba*⁷⁷ the court found that, in pinning a debtor to the ground while the debtor's vehicle was removed from the debtor's premises, the respondent corporation through its agents breached s. 60 of the Trade Practices Act. The fact that the collector had a contractual right to seize the vehicle under a mortgage over the vehicle did not permit the use of physical force to overcome the debtor's resistance to the seizure.

Undue harassment

Undue harassment may occur when repeated approaches are made or repeated pressure is applied to a debtor, going beyond what is acceptable or reasonable. While the harassment must be ‘undue’, there is no requirement that the conduct must involve the threat of an illegal act.⁷⁸

In ACCC v Maritime Union of Australia,⁷⁹ Justice Hill explained the meaning of the term undue harassment as follows:

The word harassment means in the present context persistent disturbance or torment. In the case of a person employed to recover money owing to others ... it can extend to cases where there are frequent unwelcome approaches requesting payment of a debt. However, such unwelcome approaches would not constitute undue harassment, at least where the demands made are legitimate and reasonably made. On the other hand where the frequency, nature or content of such communications is such that they are calculated to intimidate or demoralise, tire out or exhaust a debtor, rather than merely convey the demand for recovery, the conduct will constitute undue harassment. ... Generally it can be said that a person will be harassed by another when the former is troubled repeatedly by the latter. The reasonableness of the conduct will be relevant to whether what is harassment constitutes undue harassment.

Coercion

Judicial authority indicates that s. 60 of the Trade Practices Act and s. 12DJ ASIC Act prohibit any ‘coercion’, not just ‘undue coercion’.⁸⁰ The concept of coercion does not involve the element of repetition usually involved in the concept of undue harassment. Coercion is said to ‘carr[y] connotations of force or compulsion or threats of force or compulsion negating choice or freedom to act’.⁸¹ Coercion may take many forms, and is not limited to using or threatening physical force.

⁷⁷ ACCC v Davis [2003] FCA 1227. ACCC v Capalaba Pty Ltd & Others [2003] FCA 1226.

⁷⁸ Campbell v Metway Leasing Ltd (1998) ATPR 41-630.

⁷⁹ ACCC v The Maritime Union of Australia [2001] FCA 1549 at para [60] per Hill J.

⁸⁰ ACCC v The Maritime Union of Australia [2001] FCA 1549 at para [61] – [63].

⁸¹ ibid at para [63].

Prohibition of misleading and deceptive conduct

Section 52(1) Trade Practices Act

A corporation shall not, in trade or commerce, engage in conduct that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive.

Section 12DA(1) ASIC Act

A person must not, in trade or commerce, engage in conduct in relation to financial services that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive.

These provisions apply widely to trade or commerce activities, of which collectors' activities are but one aspect.

The above sections prohibit a collector from making any statement or engaging in any other conduct (for example, impersonating someone, or using a false letterhead or document) that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive. The terms 'misleading' and 'deceptive' are not defined in the law and should be understood in the way they are ordinarily used and defined.

Collectors may breach this prohibition even though they do not intend to mislead—it is enough that the misrepresentation is likely to have this effect on the type or class of person to whom the conduct is directed. In some circumstances, a collector may need to positively disclose information to avoid creating a misleading impression.

In *ACCC v McCaskey*⁸² the court accepted that a collector breached s. 52 of the Trade Practices Act by conduct towards debtors including representations that:

- the agent was about to take immediate steps to sell a debtor's residence to obtain payment of a debt owed when no legal proceedings to recover the debt had been started at the time
- the agent would arrange to have the debtor arrested by the police or the fraud squad if the debtor did not make immediate payment of the alleged debt, when there was no reasonable basis on which the collector could have taken that action.

The ACCC's publication Advertising and selling (December 2004) discusses misleading and deceptive conduct (as well as other issues) in more detail. The principles discussed there also generally apply to the prohibition against misleading or deceptive conduct in the ASIC Act. For a copy of this booklet, visit www.accc.gov.au/publications or call the ACCC InfoCentre on 1300 302 502.

⁸² ACCC v McCaskey [2000] FCA 1037.

Prohibition of unconscionable conduct

Trade Practices Act, Part IVA—unconscionable conduct (summary only)

Part IVA contains three provisions that prohibit unconscionable conduct:

- (a) section 51AA (unconscionable conduct within the meaning of the unwritten law of the states and territories)
- (b) section 51AB (unconscionable conduct)
- (c) section 51AC (unconscionable conduct in business transactions).

Section 51AB Trade Practices Act (unconscionable conduct)

This section prohibits a corporation ‘in trade or commerce, in connection with the supply or possible supply of goods or services to a person’, from engaging in ‘conduct that is, in all the circumstances, unconscionable’: s. 51AB(1).

Without limiting the matters to which a court can have regard in determining whether s. 51AB(1) has been contravened, the court can consider:

- (a) the relative strengths of the bargaining positions of the corporation and the consumer
- (b) whether as a result of the conduct the consumer was required to comply with conditions that were not reasonably necessary to protect the corporation's legitimate interests
- (c) whether the consumer was able to understand documents relating to the supply or possible supply of the goods or services
- (d) whether undue influence or pressure was exerted on, or unfair tactics were used against, the consumer or a person acting on behalf of the consumer
- (e) the amount for which, and the circumstances under which, the consumer could have acquired identical or equivalent goods from another trader.

Section 51AB is limited to unconscionable conduct in connection with the supply or possible supply of goods or services of a kind 'ordinarily acquired for personal, domestic or household use or consumption' (s. 51AB(5)).

Part 2 Div 2 Subdivision C ASIC Act—unconscionable Conduct (summary only)

This subdivision is based on, and is substantially similar to, Part IVA of the Trade Practices Act but is limited to the supply or possible supply of ‘financial services’. Unlike Part IVA of the Trade Practices Act, the subdivision applies to unconscionable conduct of ‘persons’ generally and is not limited to the conduct of ‘corporations’.

These provisions apply widely to trade or commerce activities, of which the collecting activities are but one aspect.

In particular, collectors risk breaching this prohibition when they exert undue influence or pressure on, or unfair tactics against, a debtor who is specially disadvantaged or vulnerable.

Part 3: Commonwealth consumer protection laws

In *Collection House v Taylor*⁸³ it was found that a commercial agent had acted unconscionably in trying to recover a debt that, unknown to the debtor, was statute-barred. It was also noted that the factual circumstances were sufficient to require the collector to establish that the transaction was fair, just and reasonable.

The debtor was an unemployed mother with a deaf, dependent child, who had originally defaulted on repayments for a car loan. The car was repossessed and sold. The residual debt was purchased by the commercial agent a number of years later, by which time accumulated interest had increased the amount owing to more than $10 000.

After being contacted by an employee of the commercial agent and told that legal action may be taken if a satisfactory arrangement could not be reached, the debtor agreed to pay $5000 to finalise the debt, of which $4500 was immediately charged to her credit card. The court upheld the original decision that the agent through its employee had acted unconscionably. The court noted that:

... the fact of someone from a firm of lawyers 'cold-calling' a woman of the respondent's socio-economic standing at home at 6.30 in the evening, and interrogating her as to her personal and financial circumstances while insinuating that in the absence of her agreement to pay legal proceedings may be instituted, is capable of constituting pressure of a very high order.

In *ACCC v Esanda Finance Corporation Ltd*⁸⁴ the court found that Esanda had acted unconscionably by failing to stop efforts to repossess a car subject to a chattel mortgage when it had reasonable cause to understand that a physical confrontation would occur if they continued in their attempt. This matter is related to ACCC v Davis, in that Davis was an agent of Esanda.

Other factors considered in the court's declaration of unconscionability include Esanda sending the debtor a notice implying that they would not or could not lawfully repossess the car without a court order, and then repossessing the vehicle without such an order, as well as the fact that Esanda's agents entered the debtor's residence by jumping a gate and opening a garage door from the inside.

See the ACCC's Guide to Unconscionable Conduct for more about this area of law. The principles discussed in this guide also generally apply to the ASIC Act. For a copy of this guide, visit www.accc.gov.au/publications or call the ACCC InfoCentre on 1300 302 502.

Enforcement and remedies for breaching the Trade Practices Act and ASIC Act

Fines

A collector who breaches the harassment and coercion provisions is guilty of an offence punishable on conviction by a fine of up to:

⁸³ Collection House v Taylor [2004] VSC 49.

⁸⁴ ACCC v Esanda Finance Corporation Ltd [2003] FCA 1225.

Part 3: Commonwealth consumer protection laws

- $220 000 (in the case of individuals), or
- $1 100 000 (in the case of corporations).⁸⁵

These penalties also apply when a collector is convicted of knowingly making false or misleading representations.⁸⁶ Certain defences may apply in relation to these breaches.⁸⁷

Civil orders

In addition, apart from criminal sanctions, ASIC or the ACCC can apply for civil orders against a collector, including:

- injunctions against future conduct⁸⁸
- non-punitive orders⁸⁹
- punitive orders requiring adverse publicity.⁹⁰

Damages or injunction

Finally, a debtor or third party who suffers loss or damage as a result of a collector's breach of the unconscionable conduct⁹¹, misleading or deceptive conduct⁹², harassment and coercion, or other provisions of the ASIC Act and Trade Practices Act, can recover the amount of their loss by an action for damages under these Acts.⁹³ A debtor or third party can also seek injunctive relief.⁹⁴

⁸⁵ Section 12GB(1) of the ASIC Act and ss. 6(6) and 75AZN of the Trade Practices Act. Penalties are denominated in 'penalty units' in the legislation (10 000 in the case of corporations and 2000 in the case of individuals), with 1 penalty unit being equal to $110 at the time of publication. The value of penalty units can change over time.

Appendix A: ACCC and ASIC—debt collection roles and contact details

Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC)

The ACCC is responsible for dealing with misconduct associated with debt collection activity when the debt does not relate to the provision of a financial service. This includes debts:

- for the provision of telephone or other utility services
- for the services of trades and professional people

where a retailer does not require immediate payment for a product (but not where the customer enters into a finance arrangement as that will be ASIC's responsibility).

The ACCC's responsibilities also include debts that arise because payment has been deferred (for example, a customer being billed monthly or given an extension of time to pay).

The ACCC's responsibilities cover any alleged undue harassment, coercion or unconscionable conduct in connection with the collection of the debt and any misrepresentations made about the debt. They extend to debts relating to goods and non-financial services which have been assigned or sold to a third party (for example, a debt buy-out company).

The ACCC is also responsible for any misleading or deceptive conduct relating to the actual good or service.

ACCC contact details

For matters relating to the types of debt given above, contact the ACCC:

Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC)

ASIC is responsible for dealing with misconduct associated with debt collection activity when the debt relates to the provision of a financial service. This includes debts relating to:

- credit card accounts
- home loans, personal loans and loans sourced through retailers (for example, for motor vehicles, household goods and other purposes)
- fees for the provision of financial advice, insurance and other financial products and services.

ASIC's responsibility covers any alleged undue harassment, coercion or unconscionable conduct in connection with the collection of the debt and any misrepresentations made about the debt. It extends to debts relating to the provision of a financial service which have been assigned or sold to a third party (for example, a debt buy-out company).

If there is misleading or deceptive conduct relating to the actual good or service (such as the car or the appliance) and not the debt, this will be referred to the ACCC.

ASIC contact details

For matters relating to the types of debt given above, contact ASIC:

Overlapping areas

In some situations, a complaint may relate to a range of debts, including both debts for financial services and debts for a good or non-financial services. The ACCC and ASIC have agreed to coordinate any action when debt collection conduct involves such overlapping jurisdiction.

For more information about the respective responsibilities of ASIC and the ACCC over debt collection, see the joint brochure Complaints about debt collection activity — the responsibilities of Commonwealth agencies. For a copy, contact either the ACCC or ASIC using the phone numbers provided above, or visit the ACCC or ASIC website.

Appendix B: Other statutory and common law obligations and remedies

Apart from the Commonwealth consumer protection laws (See part 3 of this guide), there are a range of other statutory and common law obligations and remedies that potentially affect collectors' operations⁹⁵. These include (but are not limited to) the following listed below.

Because this guide does not have legal force, read it subject to the rights and obligations imposed by the following and any other applicable laws and/or mandatory codes to the extent of any inconsistency.

State and territory fair trading laws

These laws,⁹⁶ based on the Trade Practices Act 1974, contain similar misconduct prohibitions to those set out in the Commonwealth legislation. However, the harassment and coercion provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1999 (Vic) and Fair Trading Act 1992 (ACT) also deem that certain specified conduct constitutes undue harassment and coercion.⁹⁷ In addition, Consumer Affairs Victoria has published Guidelines for debt collection under the Victorian Fair Trading Act (1999).⁹⁸ There may be other state and territory laws relating to consumer protection that are relevant to the collection context as well.

State and territory licensing of collectors

Most state and territory jurisdictions have occupational licensing requirements applying to a range of persons involved in collection. These laws impose certain obligations on licensees, and set out grounds on which the relevant authority can refuse to grant or cancel a licence. In Queensland, licensed commercial agents are also subject to a mandatory code of conduct, the Commercial Agency Practice Code of Conduct.⁹⁹ New South Wales has also enacted laws about the licensing of collectors.¹⁰⁰

⁹⁵ It should be noted that these laws apply to activities within their respective jurisdictions, even if the collector is physically located in another state, territory or country.

⁹⁶ Fair Trading Act 1987 (ACT), Fair Trading Act 1987 (NSW), Fair Trading Act 1989 (Qld), Fair Trading Act 1987 (SA), Fair Trading Act 1990 (Tas), Fair Trading Act 1999 (Vic), Fair Trading Act 1987 (WA), Consumer Affairs and Fair Trading Act 1990 (NT). See Appendix C for the contact details of the state and territory fair trading agencies that enforce these laws.

⁹⁷ See s. 21(2), Fair Trading Act (Vic) and s. 26(2), Fair Trading Act (ACT)

⁹⁸ Available at www.consumer.vic.gov.au.

⁹⁹ Property Agents and Motor Dealers (Commercial Agency Practice Code of Conduct) Regulation 2001 (Qld).

¹⁰⁰ Commercial Agents and Private Inquiry Agents Act 2004 (NSW).

The Uniform Consumer Credit Code [UCCC]

Uniform state and territory legislation regulates consumer credit contracts and related transactions (including mortgages, guarantees, consumer leases, and credit-related insurance). It imposes pre-contractual, contractual, and post-contractual form and disclosure obligations on credit providers, as well as some limitations on the contractual arrangements that may be entered into. It also regulates the termination and enforcement of contracts and related securities. Some important aspects of the UCCC in the context of debt collection include its provisions on: obtaining account information and documents¹⁰¹; varying repayments on grounds of hardship¹⁰²; and enforcement of credit contracts, mortgages and guarantees.¹⁰³

State and territory unauthorised documents laws

Unauthorised documents Acts in each state and territory¹⁰⁴ make it an offence to design collection letters of demand in a way that makes them look like court documents.

Bankruptcy laws

Under the Bankruptcy Act 1966, administered by the Insolvency and Trustee Service Australia, upon bankruptcy or acceptance of a Part IX debt agreement or a Part X personal insolvency agreement, a bankrupt/debtor is released from their financial obligations for provable debts. Most unsecured debts will be provable. Further action to recover provable debts directly from the bankrupt/debtor is not permitted—any further recovery must be through the scheme of administration under the Bankruptcy Act.

Privacy laws

Part IIIA of the Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) governs the handling of credit reports and other credit worthiness information about individuals by credit reporting agencies and credit providers. Some of the requirements include what information can be stored on a credit report, how long such information can be included and to whom, and under what circumstances, access is allowed.

Additionally, the National Privacy Principles regulate certain private sector entities in their dealings with personal information. These provisions of the Privacy Act, where applicable, regulate the collection, use and disclosure of personal information, and impose obligations on organisations to maintain accurate, complete and up to date records, and allow access by the individual concerned to the information held about them.

¹⁰¹ See part 2, section 10 of this guideline.

¹⁰² See part 2, section 13 of this guideline.

¹⁰³ See part 5 of the UCCC (Ending and enforcing credit contracts, mortgages and guarantees).

¹⁰⁴ City of Canberra Arms Act 1932 (ACT), Unauthorised Documents Act 1922 (NSW), Badge, Arms, Floral and other Emblems of Queensland Act 1959 (Qld), Unauthorized Documents Act 1916 (SA), Unauthorized Documents Act 1986 (Tas), Unauthorized Documents Act 1958 (Vic), Unauthorised Documents Act 1961 (WA), Flag and Emblem Act 1985 (NT).

Appendix B: Other statutory and common law obligations and remedies

The Privacy Commissioner has issued a legally binding Credit Reporting Code of Conduct, and from time to time, the Privacy Commissioner also issues determinations that may impact on the collection industry.

Tort law

Collectors who engage in extreme conduct may expose themselves to civil action in tort by a debtor. Depending on the circumstances, action for trespass, assault, wilful infliction of mental injury, nervous shock and defamation (among others) may apply.

Criminal law

Collectors who engage in extreme conduct may be charged with criminal offences including assault and demanding with menaces. A collector who refuses to leave a person's property may also be charged with trespass.

Other obligations

Collectors who are unsure of their obligations under any of the above-mentioned laws, mandatory codes and other arrangements should seek more information from the relevant regulator and/or obtain legal advice.

You should also be aware of the requirements of any voluntary code of conduct or similar instrument to which you subscribe and of the relevant rules of any trade association or professional body to which you belong.

Appendix D: Glossary

Agent: for the purposes of this guideline, a person who has actual or ostensible authority to undertake collection activity on behalf of a creditor in circumstances where a debt has not been sold or assigned.

Assigned debt: for the purposes of this guideline, any debt which has been sold, assigned, or factored by a creditor, or for which a creditor has in any other way subrogated their rights as a creditor.

Assignee: for the purposes of this guideline, a person undertaking collection activity after the sale, assignment or factoring of a debt, or the subrogation of rights by a creditor to this person.

Authorised representative: a person such as a financial counsellor, solicitor, financial advisor, carer, trustee or guardian who has been authorised by the debtor to act on behalf of the debtor.

Bankrupt: a person who has been declared bankrupt under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act 1966 and has not been discharged from the bankruptcy.

Collector: a person collecting a debt in the course of a business. It includes creditors, independent collection agencies, collections departments within businesses, debt buy-out companies, assignees, agents, lawyers, government bodies engaged in trade or commerce, court officials, and other persons¹⁰⁵ collecting on behalf of others.

Communicate: unless otherwise specified, includes communication by telephone, mobile telephone, fax, email, letter and in person.

Credit report: any record or information, whether in a written, oral or other form, that:

- is being or has been prepared by a credit reporting agency; and
- has any bearing on an individual's:
 - eligibility to be provided with credit; or
 - history in relation to credit; or
 - capacity to repay credit; and
- is used, has been used or has the capacity to be used for the purpose of serving as a factor in establishing an individual's eligibility for credit.¹⁰⁶

¹⁰⁵ The Trade Practices Act applies to corporations or individuals when they are acting as agents of a principal that is a corporation.

¹⁰⁶ Section 6(1), Privacy Act 1988.

Appendix D: Glossary

Credit listing: for the purposes of this guideline, the listing of an unpaid debt on a person's credit report.

Creditor: a person to whom a debt is incurred. In this guideline, the term continues to apply to the person to whom the debt is incurred despite the sale, assignment, factoring or outsourcing of the debt.

Debt: an amount of money owed. For the purposes of this guideline, it includes an alleged debt.

Debtor: a natural person obligated or allegedly obligated to pay a debt.

Judgment debt:¹⁰⁷ means a debt confirmed by an order or judgment of a court.

Reasonableness: is assessed according to an objective standard, taking into account all relevant circumstances.

Third party: any person other than the debtor, but does not include a debtor's legal representative, trustee, or other authorised representative. Nor does it include a related entity of the collector.

Undue harassment: please refer to the section entitled 'Prohibition of the use of physical force, undue harassment and coercion' in part 3 of this guideline.

Security interest: an interest in or a power over goods or land (whether arising by or under an instrument or transaction or arising on the execution of a warrant issued under the relevant state or territory legislation) which secures payment of a debt.

Statute-barred debt: a debt in respect of which the debtor is entitled to claim an absolute defence to legal proceedings to collect the debt due to the passage of time (as set out in the relevant statute of limitations).¹⁰⁸

¹⁰⁷ These may go by different names in different states. For example, in Queensland, judgement debts are referred to as Money Orders.

¹⁰⁸ The statute of limitations varies among the jurisdictions, but is usually set at six years following the debtor's last acknowledgement (e.g. a partial repayment) of the debt.
